For Commissioner of Insurance—
PHIL. L. SPOONER, of Dane.

For County Superintendent—1st District,
J. BOYD JONES, of Union,

The Democrats would be very much obliged if the Republicans would let them alone this fall.

If Mr. Conkling wants to make the greatest effort of his life, he should throw a little harmony in the New York convention to-morrow.

It won't matter much whether the Wisconsin Democrats have a chairman of the State committee or not. This is a season of leisure with the Democrats, a kind of a political vacation, and they don't need a leader.

One of the gratifying signs of the times is that the Hide-bound Bourbons of Virginia will likely be beaten this fall. The masses of the people in that State are getting sick of Bourbonism and will vote against it.

It is all done with Mr. Briggs, the Democratic candidate for Attorney General. He voted for the anti-treating bill last winter. While there is nothing particularly mean in doing that, the majority of Democrats, whose faith is founded on free whisky and plenty of beer, think it was an open attack on the principles of the party.

There are a great many queer freaks of justice in this country. In New York, the other day, one John Miller, a grown-up man, struck a ten-year old boy with his cane, whereupon the brave little fellow threw a cobcob at Miller. Miller had the little boy arrested and locked up in the police station all night. Will some one start a one-cent subscription?

It is a pity that Lake View cemetery did not receive all the remains of the late President Garfield. Dividing them up, placing part in bottles in the Medical museum at Washington, and giving only a part back to the soil of Ohio, is revolting. It is no wonder that Mrs. Garfield is shocked and indignant at this public exhibition of part of the sacred remains of her husband.

When the Democrats drew up their platform they were bothered to know what to say, and they went into generalities, and among other things declared "the working classes have our sympathy." This is pretty good—good for cheek, when it is known that the Democrats have for years advocated, on the stump, in the newspapers, and in Congress, a system which if put into practice by this country, would be a calamity to the working people, bringing them down to the level of the ill-paid laborers of Europe.

Prof. David Swing, who is one of the mildest of men, writes in the Alliance this week on Guiteau, and closes his able article as follows: "He surpasses all his predecessors in resembling the old idea of the devil. Not only in the name of justice, but in order to arrest at once the spread of such monstrous egotism, short work should be made of this vile criminal. The regular forms of trial should be followed because 'order is heaven's first law,' but they should be followed only as a form. The world will not admit that there is any evidence to be waited for, that there is an 'other side' in the case. Only two facts remain—a trial and a rope. The evidence was all in when the noble Garfield died. That closed the case, and left certain forms to be passed through, the most important of which is the form and substance of hanging."

When the infuriated mob at Bloomington, Illinois, were dragging the murderer Pierce, alias Hawley, to a tree on which to hang him, appeals were made by some of the more cool-headed ones, to allow the law to take its course. "Damn the law," was the cry of the mob. McLean county justice is of that sort for which the people have not the deepest respect. It has been claimed that the courts are tardy and indifferent and that the laws are losely administered. This is no excuse for mob violence, but it often is the cause for very many of the disgraceful scenes of that kind, which are becoming so frequent in this country. We have altogether too many of these mob executions, and they are growing upon us, and we may very earnestly ask, what are we going to do about it? It very often happens that communities throw themselves into rabbles, madly organize themselves into murderous mobs, and cover themselves with disgrace, because courts and authorities sometimes show a very indifferent regard for the laws, and are not very particular whether or not criminals, especially murderers, are promptly and justly dealt with. When the punishment of criminals shall be sure and reasonably swift, and the people can depend upon a wise administration of the criminal laws, there will be much less of this mob violence. But it rarely happens that solid business men, men of high standing, of cool heads and strong character, take part in these outbursts of madness which lead to violence and death. Except in very rare cases, the ones who rush into the business of lynching, are the ones weakest in mind and most easily excited, but even this class in a majority of cases, can be induced to act like men when the judiciary is above suspicion and always efficient.

MEMORIAL HOSPITAL.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 3.—The project of a National and International Garfield Memorial Hospital, to be established in Washington, and, if practicable, on the very ground where President Garfield was stricken down, has met with such widespread sympathy that a call for a public meeting Wednesday night next to take measures for its erection has been signed by nearly 200 of the most prominent citizens, including bankers, judges, bar, politicians, merchants, and citizens generally. Among the signers are W. W. Corcoran, G. W. Riggs & Co., Judge Cox, A. S. Solomons, General Sherman, and Father Boyle.

GUITEAU.

Brief Examination of Witnesses

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The Grand Jury of the District assembled this morning and considered the case of Guiteau. Eight witnesses were examined and the jury adjourned until to-morrow, when it is expected that a presentment for murder will be made to the court. The witnesses to-day were Surgeon General Barnes, Dr. D. S. Lamb, of the medical museum; George W. Adams, of the Evening Star of this city: E. A. Bailey, Officer Kearney, Dectective McElfresh, and Sarah E. V. White.

District Attorney Corkhill questioned the witnesses. Dr. Barnes who was one of the attending physicians up to the time that the ex-President was taken to Long Branch, testified regarding his attendance upon the wounded man, the extent of his injuries, etc. He swore that in his opinion death was inevitable from the character of the wound. Dr. Lamb gave evidence as to the autopsy, which he conducted, and the condition of affairs which the autopsy revealed.

The other witnesses described incidents connected with the shooting. Mr. Adams was entering the depot as the assassin fired, and saw the tragedy. Mr. Bailey also saw the shooting.

Mrs. White was in the room when the President fell, and she supported his head in her lap until the wounded man was carried up stairs away from the crowd. Robert A. Parke gave evidence as to seizing the prisoner immediately after the shots had been fired.

The testimony given by each person examined was very brief, the object of the district attorney being to satisfy the grand jury as to the commission of the crime as expeditiously as possible. Guiteau was fully identified as the murderer. The jury adjourned until to-morrow, when Dr. Lamb, and possibly one or two other witnesses, will give additional evidence regarding the crime. It is expected that a presentment will be made to the court to-morrow or next day, and Guiteau will be arraigned as soon after the district attorney can draw the indictment as possible.

Scoville, Guiteau's counsel, will arrive here to-morrow. He will hold a consultation with the prisoner, and it is not unlikely that Guiteau may be brought into court on Wednesday, Mr. Corkhill refuses to say when the prisoner will be arraigned and it is expected that he will be brought to the bar at an unusual hour, to avoid all risks of violence from a mob. Mr. Corkhill is emphatically of the opinion that none but the district courts have jurisdiction to try the prisoner. He says that if, after the trial has taken place, the prisoner's counsel shall secure a writ of habeas corpus, and the supreme court should decide that the district court had not jurisdiction in the case, that Guiteau would not escape punishment, because a mis-trial would not be regarded as having placed the life of the culprit in jeopardy.

ABETTORS OF THE FRAUDS.

Some Western Postmasters in Danger of Losing their Positions.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—As the star-route prosecutions go on there will be a general weeding-out of dishonest postmasters in the far western States and Territories. There are believed to be over two hundred postmasters implicated in the star route frauds. They have been paid, as were postmasters at Deadwood and Sidney, for certifying to the performance of mail service which was never performed. The greatest frauds in the star service were the failures on the part of the contractors to do the service they had agreed to perform. In numerous instances no pretense of carrying the mails over the entire length of large routes was made, the false certificates of postmasters along the line only being necessary to enable the contractors to draw pay. Congress, at the next session, will be asked to enact a law which will severely punish postmasters so offending. It may be something of a surprise to the champions of General Brady's administration, who have been continually clamoring since he left office about the reduction of mail facilities in the West, to know that Postmaster General James has established, since last March, 499 new star routes. At the same time, however, there has been a reduction of over 3,000 miles of star routes established by Brady, which careful examination and personal inspection by post-office agents has shown to be utterly useless.

Further Details of the Indian Troubles in Arizona.

TUCSON, Arizona, October 3.—A Citizen's special from Wilcox says a party of soldiers, sent out to repair the telegraph lines between Forts Grant and Thomas, were attacked by Chiricahua Indians, this afternoon, and two soldiers were killed.

A courier just in from Cedar Springs says he saw the dead bodies of several citizens at that point.

The command following the Chiricahuas are reported now as fighting Indians fifteen miles from Grant. The command consists of four companies of cavalry. The Indians are in the hills. Much excitement prevails here to-night.

A special from Wilcox says Hartolo San Diago and his six teamsters were killed at Cedar Springs yesterday by Chirricahua Indians.

TUCSON, A. T., Oct. 3.—A Star special from Wilcox gives the following particulars of the fight at Cedar Creek. The Indians, numbering 75 to 100, attacked Samaniego's train about one mile east of Cedar Springs, between 8 and 9 o'clock a. m., killing Barlot, Samaniego, and five teamsters. Samaniego and the men made a stubborn fight for their lives.

The Indians attacked Sanford's command about 3 o'clock p. m., three miles from the station. The fight lasted until dark, when the Indians withdrew.

The Indians also killed a telegraph operator and four soldiers, who were repairing the telegraph line.

Sanford's command lost one sergeant killed and six men wounded.

IRRITATION OF THE SCALP.

An Authentic Testimony.

Gentlemen: For five years I have been greatly troubled with dandruff, with a severe itching of the scalp, and my hair falling out. I have tried almost every known remedy, all proving worthless. Seeing BURNETT'S COCOAINE and BURNETT'S KALLISTON advertised, I procured a bottle of each, and am happy to state that the dandruff is completely removed, and no itching remains.

THE WILLIAMS BROTHERS.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 3.—Governor Cullom to-day offered a reward of $500 for the capture of the notorious Williams brothers, who recently turned up in Pike county and killed the Sheriff of Calhoun county, who attempted to capture them, besides wounding two of the posse. Since that time they have been roaming around in Calhoun county, and have had little trouble in avoiding capture. They seem to obtain considerable aid from citizens of Calhoun county, either through fear or friendliness, and their capture has been found thus far to be impossible. One of their recent exploits was to ride into a small village saloon and order the drinks for a crowd of loafers. The loafers drank, but the desadoes did not. They promptly rode away and no one attempted to molest them. They are heavily armed, and carry a Henry rifle and a powerful field glass, by the aid of which they have been able to detect pursuers long before they are discovered by the officers. Their capture will be a big feature in the cap of the officer who effects it.

"Sellers' Liver Pills" have been the standard remedy for malaria, liver complaint, costiveness, etc., for fifty years.

THE MAXWELL BOYS.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 3.—The Maxwell boys are supposed to be on Bay Island, four miles above Hamburg. A posse of men from Hardin, Ill., will go in pursuit.

BARNUM'S FAT WOMAN.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., October 3.—The wife of John Craig, better known as Mary Powers, the fat woman who traveled with Barnum's circus, died last evening of dropsy of the heart at Danville, Ind. She weighed about 600 pounds. A coffin especially made for her was sent from this city this afternoon.

CRUSHED BY AN ELEVATOR

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 3.—Frank Reinder, aged 40 years, an employe of the Blair & Persons crockery house, was instantly killed this afternoon while coming from the cellar to the first floor in the freight elevator. He fell between the elevator and the wall, and was crushed into an unrecognizable mass.

Brace Up! Brace Up! Brace Up!

We have now the most complete stock of Braces ever offered in the city, including all styles and sizes of the best goods in the market. The "Prince Brace" for ladies, is specially recommended to persons who suffer from weakness of the muscles of the back and chest, or who are round shouldered.

You are invited to call and examine the general construction, by which a perfect strengthening support is given to the back, at the same time drawing the shoulders back so as to expand the chest and throw the body into an erect, graceful position. All tendency to round shoulders is thus avoided, and this to the young at the period when bones and muscles are growing and hardening is a most important item.

Provision is made for attaching skirts and stocking supporters, thus relieving the hips entirely, and for fast growing misses it will be found particularly desirable.

THE LITTLE KINGS AND QUEENS.

Monarchs whose kingdom no man bounds,
No leagues uphold, no conquest spreads,
Whose thrones are any mossy mounds,
Whose crowns are curls on sunny heads!

The only sovereigns on the earth
Whose sway is certain to endure:
No line of kings of kingliest birth
Is of its reigning half so sure.

No fortress built in all the land
So strong they can not storm it free;
No palace made too rich, too grand,
For them to roam triumphantly.

No tyrant so hard-hearted known
Can their diplomacy resist;
They can usurp his very throne:
He abdicates when he is kissed.

No hovel in the world so small,
So meanly built, so squalid, bare,
They will not go within its wall,
And set their reign of splendor there.

No beggar too forlorn and poor
To give them all they need to thrive;
They frolic in his yard and door,
The happiest kings and queens alive.

Oh, blessed little kings and queens,
The only sovereigns in the earth!
Their sovereignty nor rests nor leans
On pomp of riches or of birth,

Nor ends when cruel death lays low
In dust each little curly head.
All other sovereigns crownless go,
And are forgotten, when they're dead;

But these hold changeless empire past,
Triumphant past, all earthly scenes:
We worship, truest to the last,
The buried "little kings and queens."

DORA DEANE.

She was thirty-two, and the prefix which would indicate her a married woman was still wanting from her name. Yet there were no lines of disappointment about Dora Deane's mouth; no troubled expression in the clear gray eyes. Yet she looked a woman to love and to be loved. She was not beautiful, but people had always called her a pretty girl. They called her so still (so youthful was the graceful figure and mobile face), until they stopped to reckon on their fingers and discovered the term "woman" was more appropriate. There was about her, too, a certain distinctive charm—a something which made strangers turn again as she passed them by for a second glance. She was neither belle nor beauty. She could have married many times, but—perhaps because she felt that love was one of the essentials lacking, perhaps because the ideal was not attained—she remained Dora Deane still. Thus the gossips reasoned. Pry as they would, they could discover no early disappointment, no hidden romance, in all the years she had lived among them. Yet, peeping over her shoulder, as is our privilege, noting the delicate flush upon her cheek, the light in her eye, the trembling of the little hand which holds a letter written in firm, bold characters, they might have seized upon a clue we are too generous to fasten or follow. The words she had perused were these:

"The fever has broken out again quite hotly with us, and I am anxious Cara should breathe purer air. May I drive her out to-morrow and leave her for a fortnight? My messenger will wait your answer.

"RONALD RAY."

"Of course she might come," thought Miss Deane.

Dear little Cara! Doctor Ray was her guardian. She had been left to his care when a little child of three years. She must be eighteen now. For six years she had been at school. Now she had returned to her guardian's home, to remain until some one stole her away to grace another. But she was still a child. That was but a remote possibility for the distant future.

Ronald Ray was a physician in the great city in one of whose suburbs was Miss Deane's beautiful home. How many years she had known him! He had even come to her first, in that long-ago time, to tell her the story of the child confided to his care.

She had been but seventeen herself then, he six years her senior. They had been friends always, but lately she had seen more of him than his usual wont. He had talked with her of Cara's home-coming—of the plans he had matured for her amusement—of the pleasure his mother would experience in having her bright young presence constantly near her; and she had listened, as she had always listened when Ronald Ray talked—listened with a beating heart and fleeting color. But it had never betrayed her secret even to him. She had scarce acknowledged it to herself. She only knew that other men might come and go, but were all powerless, even by the most passionate protestations of devotion, to waken that called forth by his simplest word.

But lately he had been different. There had been a light in his eye like that within her own—a suppressed excitement in his manner totally at variance with his usual calm. And now from among his legion of friends he had chosen her home where his ward might be a guest.

Her thoughts were very busy as she made her preparations to receive her visitor. With her own hands she gathered and arranged the flowers that were to welcome her in the pretty room she had assigned her, joining her own.

In the dusk of evening, the sound of wheels announced their coming.

"Dear Miss Dora!" exclaimed a sweet, girlish voice, as some one sprang from the carriage, ere the doctor could alight to assist her. "It is all nonsense, Ronald's sending me away from home! But so long as he insisted on it, I am so glad it is here! We shall have such nice times together—that is, if you have not forgotten me."

And she impulsively threw her arms about the elder woman's neck.

There was a charm—a winsomeness—about her impossible to resist. Dora Deane felt her heart go out toward her anew, as it had done when, a tiny, golden-haired child, she had climbed upon her knee and fallen asleep cradled in her arms.

Not until they had all gone in together into the lighted drawing-room did she discover how fully the child's promise of rare beauty had redeemed itself.

But the light was less merciless elsewhere. It showed the physician's face pale and careworn, and bearing traces of overwork and lack of sleep. Dora found a moment during Cara's gay prattle to lay her hand upon his sleeve.

"Take care of yourself," she half whispered. "I fear you forget that, in your care for others. You are not looking well."

"Nonsense!" he laughed. "The idea of a doctor not being able to take care of himself! It is like the cook allowing herself to starve. You would almost persuade my patients, Miss Dora, to lose faith in me, which reminds me that I am losing precious time, and must be off. A thousand thanks for receiving this child! I shall see you as often as possible, and shall now have a double inducement in coming."

Was it all fancy that his voice was lower as he uttered this last sentence? and was it all unconscious the pressure of the little hand of his hostess as it lay for a moment within his own?

However that might be, Dora's heart felt strangely light as she listened to the echo of the retreating wheels of Doctor Ray's carriage.

Cara had been her guest a fortnight, during which time the Doctor had fulfilled his promise of devoting to them all his spare moments; but these were very few. The fever was increasing rather than abating. Miss Deane bade fair to have her guest for a long visit.

"But you're not tired of me, are you?" Cara asked, when her guardian hinted something of this.

"No, indeed," she answered, with a bright smile. "The question is—what shall I do without you?"

The three were standing together when she thus spoke, but as she finished Ronald Ray leaned over, and in a low tone said, so that only her ear caught the words:

"To-morrow when I come I want to see you alone. I have something to say to you."

Why—why could she not hide the tell-tale blood which so deeply dyed her cheek as she bowed her assent? In all these years he had never spoken quite thus before. Was it that Cara's bright presence had renewed her own youth, until in his eyes she had recovered it? Surely she might dwell a moment on the sweet hope of which his wish must form the threshold!

The next day she waited him in her own little morning-room. She had given orders to the servants that he should be admitted there. Cara she had sent for a drive.

Her heart beat fast to suffocation as at length she heard his step. He crossed the room with his firm tread to where she stood, and took both her hands in his.

"Dora," he began, "I have come to you to confide to you the secret of my life. I know that you are frank and true. Tell me, then, and tell me honestly—am I too old to love and to be loved?"

Be still, glad heart—be still! How long had her secret been acknowledged even to herself? It broke its bonds now, and burst upon her in a glad, rapturous vision, which showed the past gray and sombre, the future in a brilliance which blinded her.

"Too old?" she said in tones that trembled spite of her efforts to control them. "No—a thousand times no!"

He raised her hands to his lips and kissed them. It was the first time his kiss had touched them.

"My friend, he whispered, low, "you have guessed my secret, have you not? You have seen it? How could I hope to hide it except from her? She suspects nothing. Tell me how I shall approach her that I may not startle her. She is as yet but a child. You are a woman, Dora. Help me!"

Was she still standing upright? About her were the crushed ruins of her castle, which scarce sixty seconds before had towered to the clouds. The noise of the falling fragments had stunned her. Had he not heard? The dust which had arisen therefrom blinded her. Could he not see?

"You are a woman, Dora. Help me!"

These were the words ringing in her ears. Oh, God! had she not greater need for help?

"You love Cara?"

How calm and quiet her voice sounded, even to herself!

"Love her? Ah, Dora, you who have never loved can little guess how much!"

She laughed then. Something in the words amused her; something that showed her how well she had kept her secret—an old maid's secret.

"Talk to her," he went on. "Tell me if she feels, if she will ever feel, for me that for which I long."

"Nay, speak to her yourself," she answered. "She scarcely can deny you, pleading your own cause."

"You think so? Then I will come to-morrow. Good-by! God bless you!"

At last she was alone. The knowledge came with a long sigh of relief, as some hours later the "Good-nights" had been said, and Dora could face the misery the morning had brought her. How long—how very long ago it seemed! She drew a chair beside the open window, and sank into it heavily.

At that moment a faint tap sounded on the door, and a golden-crowned head pushed itself through the space where it was held ajar.

"Please let me in, dear Miss Dora!" said a young voice. "I can't sleep and I want to talk to you."

Then, without waiting further permission, a little, white-robed figure glided in and sank on the stool at her feet.

The moonlight showed the fair, upturned face, and was it only the shadow resting on her own soul which made the older woman fancy that a graver expression was upon it than its wont? She softly stroked the bright hair.

"I—I have something to tell you, Miss Dora," the girl went on, after a little pause. "I love you so much that I would like that you should hear it first. But tell me first—am I still a child? And do you not think that children, as Ronald calls me, can love?"

"You love, then?"

Almost breathlessly she put the question. Her own pain was swallowed up in the joy that, at least to Ronald, his love would not be returned to him as bitter Dead Sea fruit.

"Yes, I love," said Cara. It was such a funny accident, our meeting. It was two ——— His regiment was stationed at the same town where I was at school. He is only a Lieutenant, but he is so brave, so handsome! My own dear father was an officer, you know. I think remembering that made me first care for him."

Then Miss Deane recovered her breath.

"A Lieutenant! Who is this man? Of whom are you talking?"

"His name is Harry Linden. He will be here next week. He is coming down, he writes me, to ask my guardian's formal permission to marry me. Oh, Miss Dora! do you think he will refuse or be angry? He is so old, perhaps he will have forgotten that he, too, once was young.

Bitterest mockery of Fate! So old, she said, and not yet had forty years crowned his brow.

Once again she met Ronald Ray alone, as he came next day to plead his cause. He listened, with a white, drawn face, while she told him of that other secret with which she had been entrusted, meanwhile sparing him, in the telling, all she could.

In her tender pitying for his wound, she forgot that hers, too, bled.

"You have been very kind," he said, when she had finished. "I—I am glad that she never suspected the truth. I will not see her to-day. To-morrow I will be stronger."

He turned; but as he gained the threshold, he tottered, strove to recover himself, but failed, and fell forward on the floor.

The fever was upon him. Already in his veins, the shock had brought the hidden enemy to light. Tossing in delirium for many weeks, Dora learned how wholly the man's heart had fastened itself upon the one hope which so cruelly had failed him. For a time, it seemed as though it had sapped the foundation of his life; but it proved not so.

There came a day when, opening his eyes, he recognized the nurse whose gentle touch had soothed all his feverfancy hours. Slowly he regained his strength; but it seemed as though returning health brought with it new vision.

Cara's acknowledged lover was with them now. They who had welcomed him for her sake soon did so for his own. Seeing them together, none could wonder that each had chosen the other; but how the sight must pain the older man!

With all her ingenuity, Dora strove to keep it from him, until he said to her, one day:

"My wound has been cauterized; it hurts no longer."

He was brave and hid it, she told herself. Did she not know that such wounds never healed?

Thus the weeks rolled on, until it came the time for Cara's wedding. She had to return to her guardian's home, which she now was to leave forever.

It was the evening before her marriage, when Dora, sitting alone, heard the step she had learned to know so well.

As he had done once before, entering the room where she sat, he came straight toward her, taking both her hands in his.

"Dora," he said, "do you remember that you once told me that pleading my cause I could not be denied? Will you make good your words? Must I be punished because for long years I have been blind? I love you, dear! I want you for my own—my wife! Will you forgive the infatuation which misled me from the real cry of my heart, and now answer it? It is very empty. Will you fill it?"

She looked up into his face. Was it pity that she read there—pity which prompted the words for which her hungry heart had thirsted all these years? No, no! It was the light of love, and it burned for her. She knew it even as she knew that it should light her footsteps down into the valley and shadow of eternity; and, so knowing, she gave to him the promise that he asked.—Saturday Night.

Nearly a Miracle.

E. Asenith Hall, Binghampton, N. Y., writes, "I suffered for several months with a dull pain through left lung and shoulders. I lost my spirits, appetite and color, and could with difficulty keep up all day. My mother procured some BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS; I took them as directed, and have felt no pain since first week after using them, and am now quite well." Price $1,00, trial size 10 cents.

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT

"What will TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT cure?" asks the sufferer from a multitude of diseases. We answer: It will remove from the system the active cause of most of the diseases that flesh is heir to. It won't mend a broken limb, nor close a bullet hole; but it may be profitably used in stomachic diseases. It will do no one any harm, and may do much good. Try it and see if it won't suit your case.

THE PASTILLE Prof. Harris' Radical Cure TradeMark FOR NERVOUS DEBILITY

SOLD IN ANY PART

AND SPERMATORRHŒA.

A valuable Discovery and New Departure in Medical Science, an entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent Cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency by the only true way, viz.: Direct Application to the principal Seat of the Disease, acting by Absorption, and exerting its specific influence on the Seminal Vesicles, Ejaculatory Ducts, Prostate Gland, and Urethra. The use of the Remedy is attended with no pain or inconvenience, and does not interfere with the ordinary pursuits of life; it is quickly dissolved and soon absorbed, producing an immediate soothing and restorative effect upon the sexual and nervous organizations wrecked from self-abuse and excesses, stopping the drain from the system, restoring the mind to health and sound memory, removing the Dimness of Sight, Nervous Debility, Confusion of Ideas, Aversion to Society, etc., etc., and the appearance of premature old age usually accompanying this trouble, and restoring perfect Sexual Vigor, where it has been dormant for years. This mode of treatment has stood the test in very severe cases, and is now a pronounced success. Drugs are too much prescribed in these troubles, and, as many can bear witness to, with but little if any permanent good. There is no Nonsense about this Preparation. Practical observation enables us to positively guarantee that it will give satisfaction. During the eight years that it has been in general use, we have thousands of testimonials as to its value, and it is now conceded by the Medical Profession to be the most rational means yet discovered of reaching this very prevalent trouble, that is well known to be the cause of untold misery to so many, and upon whom quacks prey with their useless nostrums and big fees. The Remedy is put up in neat boxes, of two sizes. No. 1, (enough to last a month,) $3; No. 2, (sufficient to effect a permanent cure, unless in severe cases,) $5; No. 3, containing over three months, will stop emissions and restore vigor in the worst cases,) $7. Sent by mail, sealed, in plain wrappers. Full DIRECTIONS for using will accompany EACH BOX.

Send for letter Pamphlet, giving Anatomical Illustrations and Testimony, which will convince the most skeptical that they can be restored to perfect manhood, and fitted for the duties of life, same as if never affected. Sold ONLY by

By reading this table carefully, the public can post themselves thoroughly upon the arrival and departure of all the mails, and thus avoid much inconvenience to themselves.

H. A. PATTERSON, P. M.

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

—Lord Rosebery is one of the few Scotch noblemen who have a residence in Edinburgh, and there are certainly not more than three peers who have residences in Dublin.

—The Queen once spun enough yarn from flax grown on the estate of the Earl of Caledon to be woven into a table napkin, which was lately on exhibition at a fair in England.

—It may be a surprise to most readers to learn that the Prince of Wales is overworked. This view of his case, however, concedes that attendance at receptions, horse races, charity ceremonials, and corner-stone layings is work.

—The bedroom furniture of Lord Beaconsfield, which has just been sold in London, was covered with blue silk, having roses in bloom spread gracefully over it, and the same delicate fabric was used as hangings for the walls and for curtains to bed and windows.

—A London correspondent at Ems says, after expressing amazement at the stolidity of the average visitor: "The other day a maid threw herself into the river. Twenty Germans looked on unmoved. An American gentleman, who was heavily clad and wore an overcoat, leaped in, and with great difficulty saved her, for he first clutched her hair, which proved false. Until she was on the bank, no one else offered any aid."

—The King of Bavaria has been visiting the Lakes of the Four Cantons in Switzerland. He took a suite of twenty apartments in the Axenstein Hotel; but there was too much noise and publicity to suit him and he changed his abode to a hotel in the village of Brunnen. He continues his eccentricities. He passes all night rowing on the lake and looking at the stars.

—The small and picturesque village of San Idlefonso is the temporary residence of the Court of Madrid this summer, and the birthday of the young Queen of Spain was recently celebrated there. There was a reception at the palace, and an amateur bull-fight, which is still a popular element and always a festival among the young aristocracy in Spain, notwithstanding the greatly increased popularity of horse racing during the last two years. There was also a grand display of the great fountains, which rival those of Versailles.

—Queen Victoria wished to elevate the late Dean Stanley to a bishopric, and expressed great displeasure at his refusal. "I am so contented with my deanery that I would not leave it for any bishopric," was his reply. It was when the Queen was quite assured of his serious intention to live and die Dean of Westminster that the idea was suggested to her of keeping Lady Augusta Bruce, her maid of honor, to whom she was greatly attached, ever near her by a marriage with Stanley. She dreaded Lady Augusta's abandonment of England to settle in Canada, where her brother, Lord Elgin, was Governor. Stanley was exactly the man to suit the quiet habits and religious tastes of Lady Augusta, and the marriage was always considered one of the happiest of all those concluded under the auspices of Her Majesty, whose talent for matchmaking is proverbial.

The Thugs of India.

Of the many dangerous castes in this singular country, who profess in one form or another the Hindoo religion, there are none so dangerous as the followers of the Goddess Kali, more familiarly known as Thugs. For over two thousand years has this race existed, working through dark and devious ways its fearful record of crime. Like the serpent, of which he is fit emblem, the Thug is sinewy, slippery and eel-like in his movements, carefully covering up his traces, and leaving no indication as to where he has been, or what route he intends to pursue. As a companion he is desirable, making himself agreeable and welcome to the very persons he intends sacrificing as a propitiatory offering to his blood-loving and murderous deity. So firmly has this society held together, so inviolable have the members preserved their dread secret, so dangerous have they been to the Indian community, that they were courted in such a way that nothing was permitted to be said, written or done against them, so fearful were the native Governments of drawing upon them and their subjects the terrible enginry of their dreadful power. The caste was known to exist, much as death is known to be ever present. But no actual steps were taken for the suppression of thuggery till the year 1830. In 1810 the British power became first alive to the fact that the Thugs were no myth begotten of Hindoo fancy and fairy-tale legend, but a positive and dangerous reality, who were daily, nightly, nay, hourly, strangling unfortunate creatures, who happened to chance their way. No surmise can be correct as to the number of men, women and children that have met their death at the hands of the Thug, but the best authorities declare that it must be several millions.

The Thugs practice murder as a priest would a service. They do not murder for the sake of robbery, nor as a means of livelihood, but their religion requires human sacrifice without the shedding of blood. So a Thug, before he can enter upon the service of his goddess, has to study the art of strangling. This is not so easy as it may at first sight appear. Ostensibly the Thugs are tinkers, and in that capacity travel throughout the country. In order to preserve their secret they do not let their wives know the nature of their religion, believing that a woman can not keep a secret. The contracting parties on the male side, know, of course, that they are giving their daughter to a Thug, for a Thug would only give his child to one of his own caste. But the woman is innocent as to the character of her spouse. She has to assist in one crime, but that comes easy to her, that is to kill her female children. This is accomplished by administering to the new-born babe a pinch of salt. To all Hindoos male children are a source of delight as well as pride, the woman considering herself disgraced if she only gives birth to female children. To his wife the Thug is kind and considerate, humoring her whims, and among Hindoo women he is looked upon as a paragon of a husband, not making her a beast of burden, but giving her fine clothes and trinkets, the best of food, and keeping her at peace with himself and the world at large. Seldom, though, does the good husband stay at home and enjoy the company of his wife; he is ever bound on distant excursions, and always on business, but as that business gives her money and jewelry she is reconciled to the separation, and never thinks of inquiring into the nature of his transactions. The education of his sons is his chief care; for he has to educate his boy to the profession of murdering his fellow-creatures. In Hindostan boys and girls come to the age of maturity about twelve and ten respectively. So at the age of eleven commences the young Thug's schooling. He is taken with his father on one of the distant excursions, but not a word is breathed about the human sacrifice. This is continued for a year, giving the boy an inclination for wandering and also an unsettled disposition. During this time the youth has heard a great deal, seen a little, and is permitted to indulge himself in every license.

Another quality the Thugs cultivate to perfection is that of being pleasing and entertaining. They are generally sharper than other Hindoos, having traveled and seen more than the ordinary run of the orthodox Brahmin. They tell capital stories, sing well, and know every league of country for miles around their villages. Their general plan of action is this: Hearing that a caravan has to pass by a certain lonely road, they determine to murder every man, woman and child belonging to it, though it may number a couple of hundred people. One of their number is deputed as a decoy, who is to lead the party into ambush. The work is done in this manner: Along the road in which the company has to pass the Thug travels, alone and unprotected, with his stock in trade slung over his shoulder. He catches up with the party and begs permission to travel with them, fearing murder and robbery. Permission is accorded; who could suspect the meek, mild-mannered individual, with pleasing face and humble demeanor, of being a Thug? His dress is but scanty, and he looks poor and ill-fed. No sooner has the Thug secured admission than he brings into play all his fascination. In the south of India, the heat being less than in North India, much of the travel is done by day, and when squatting round the camp-fire, which is made to keep at bay wild animals, the Thug proves an interesting companion. He tells ancient stories, legends of the gods, sings a song, plays upon the Indian violin, and suggests the best routes to pursue. His victims are gulled. They repose in him the most perfect confidence, and are ready to follow him anywhere and everywhere. All this time the party doomed to destruction are being followed by a crowd of equally interesting Thugs.

The decoy gives each day explicit instructions to his unseen followers, by either marking on trees, breaking off a twig or throwing a piece of rag on the trail, all of which signs are as plain to members of the caste as would be a well-written and minute code of instructions to more civilized people. His directions are implicitly obeyed, and the caravan is surrounded by a crowd of Thugs ready at any moment to fall upon and strangle every member composing it, at the word of their villainous chief. As time for action draws near he directs some few to go ahead, in fact, draws around it a perfect cordon—some for action, others merely to act as scouts, and give warning of danger to those composing the main body, who in like manner communicate with their chief. When the party is too large he calls to his aid another. They and the other two travel for a short distance together, but this is very seldom, as two amusing people generally clash, and discord would be the consequence. If the caravans consisted of 200 people the chief would probably not be content with a following of less than 500; for there is no danger of detection as long as no one escapes, and every care is taken that none escape. At a signal given generally at night, when people are tired and asleep, the crowd close in upon their prey, two men to each victim. One holding the mouth, the other prepares the twine, slips it around the neck, and ere the lapse of half an hour the foul deed is accomplished. The company which but a few minutes ago were men in rude health now have passed away to the great silent majority, and the Thug's work is done. Such articles as take most his fancy are seized, the bodies buried. Every trace of the murder is hidden and the Thug either assumes the role of the caravan traveler or disappears as suddenly as he appeared, leaving nothing in the train of that disaster but the wonderings and comments on the part of the friends of the murdered. Unfortunately the law demands evidence ere a conviction can be had, and though there may be strong grounds of probability that certain men have been engaged in thuggery, it would be a dangerous precedent for the law to proceed on such assumption. I have been told of many instances where men suspected of Thuggism have been brought to the katcherrils (courts) and after long trial have been condemned to suffer the extreme penalty of the law, yet even then it was doubted whether they were actually Thugs or simple murderers.—Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

Traveling in Mexico.

In Mexico there are no hotels or boarding-houses, except in large cities where foreigners reside. As stage-coaches and other public conveyances are rare, the travel is mostly done on horseback. The saddle is generally mounted with gold or silver, and richly ornamented. The rowels of the spur are as big as a silver dollar, but the points are very dull. The spur seems intended more to frighten the horse than to hurt him. The Mexicans are expert riders, being much in the saddle. In traveling quite a retinue of servants is necessary. You have to take along your bedding on a pack-mule, with servants to attend to the mule and the luggage, and a cook to prepare your meals. In many parts of the country it is necessary to take your provisions with you, and all the conveniences for camping out. In some places it is difficult to get drinking water for yourself and your animals unless you buy it. If you can not reach a settlement at night you camp out; in a town, you can usually rent a room, entirely unfurnished, for the night. The servants spread the bedding on the floor, purchase provisions in the market, and prepare the meal in Mexican style. Bedsteads, tables and chairs are luxuries known only to the most wealthy among the native inhabitants.

Butter the Mexicans do not know how to make. The sugar is a very crude article, inferior to our darkest brown sugar, and is sold in little cones, that weigh about a pound. Cheese is made in cones of similar size, from goat's milk. Cow's milk is used only fresh, and is never made into cheese or butter. Horses in Mexico are never used for draught purposes, but are employed only for riding. Mules and oxen do all the work of transportation. The fine wines made at El Paso on the Rio Grande are transported in skins, as in Bible times. Bottles, kegs and barrels are almost unknown. In many portions of the country timber is too scarce to be used for casks; and a frame house would be a very expensive affair. American influence will soon instil new life into this primative people. The railroads now building will be the means of civilizing the country, developing its immense natural resources. It has a beautiful climate and vast mineral treasures, which only await this foreign stimulus to be made a source of national wealth and prosperity.

A Malicious Druggist.

A man who at one time dealt in drugs and groceries at Rome, N. Y., had the curiosity to keep the bulk of the misspelled notes which he received from various sources and paste them in a scrap book. The Sentinel publishes half a column of specimens, from which we cull the following:

One small scrap of paper contains simply the words "Car bolick assid."

Another contains the cabalistic words, "Surep epeak."

No one except a druggist would know that the person who wrote for "perovd bark and allus" wanted Peruvian bark and aloes.

The person who wrote for "one ounce of grose of suppliment" wanted corrosive sublimate, no doubt.

A person with a weak back writes for a "Bourous Plaster."

A "shamie leather skin" is called for by a person who wants a chamois skin.

"Bickrement off potash," which is called for in one note, probably means bichromate of potash.

In another note bichromate of potash is tortured into "prock mate of potash."

"Bludroot" and "liqurash" are called for in another note.

Some person wrote for "anuff yellow to culler to bbls of cotton raggs."

Opodeldoc is spelled "oberdelduck" in one note, and in another sedlitz powders come in for the following: "Sutlife powders."

It was a very careful person who wrote magnesia thus: "Mag-ne-cia."

An ounce of "red percipity" is called for in another note.

"Corgal for baby" is called for in one note, and two ounces "Camfur" in another.

The simple word "Arnicky" stands out solitary and alone on a small scrap of paper. It can not be taken for anything in the drug line except arnica.

Here is one that "takes the cake," as the boy says: "Keyan pepper, Cam fire, Lod nom, Rheu bub, Pepper mint."

—An enterprising but impecunious Philadelphian borrowed money enough to furnish an office and hang out a sign: "Franklin Protective Association." Then he went to work among the negroes, telling them of imaginary benefits to be obtained in the future by joining his society, and now he has an income of $125 a week from members' dues.

—A Connecticut woman has given her son a large comforter made of hair cut from her own head during ten years.

DR. PRICE'S REPUTATION!

Has been acquired by candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

My practice, not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with years of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, make sick to make well; no harsh treatment, no trifling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed; no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic Diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinions, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or cure everybody, but do lay claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their ailment, to call and investigate before they abandon hope, make interrogations and decide for yourselves; it will cost nothing as consultation is free. BRIEFLETS.

—Pickle October.

—Council meeting to-morrow night.

—Ed. F. Welch favors us with a batch of Leadville papers.

—The suction hose for the East side engine arrived yesterday.

—"The Iron Mask" at the Opera house again this evening. The house should be packed.

—Mrs. Charles H. Carpenter has been called to Chicago, by the death of her brother, diptheria being the fatal disease.

—Rev. T. P. Sawin's throat tronbled him so that he was obliged Sunday evening to stop in the midst of his sermon, and close the service. He is on the gain now.

—Amusement lovers cannot complain of the quantity of entertainments now offered, and if all prove like the "Iron Mask," they cannot complain of quality either.

—A. Mackee, the advertising agent of the Burr Robbins and Colvin shows, arrived in the city to-day. He is a young man of both enterprise and experience, and more than that, a pleasant gentleman to meet.

—Rock County may well feel proud of its horses. Among those that appeared at the State Fair were several belonging to Dr. Strong, of Beloit. They brought home three first and one second premiums.

—Michael Holloran pleaded guilty in the Municipal court this morning to a charge of drunkenness, and was sent to jail for three days, and put under bonds to keep the peace for six months, whisky seeming to have the effect with him, of making him use abusive and threatening language to his neighbors.

—A billboard alongside of T. F. Murray's building on Main street, is now a matter of dispute. David Jeffries claims the ownership of it, as does also Mr. Murray. By order of Mr. Jeffries the board was torn down to-day, whereupon Mr. Murray has had those concerned in the destruction of the board arrested for interfering with his property.

—Rev. D. J. Holmes, who has lately been transferred from Oshkosh to the First Methodist church, of this city, occupied his new pulpit here on Sunday last, preaching two excellent sermons. He returned to Oshkosh yesterday, and will prepare at once to move his family to this city; expecting to occupy Rev. S. C. Thomas' house, on Jackson street, opposite the First Methodist church.

—Last night death again shadowed the home, which three weeks ago was saddened by the death of a son and a brother, Noble D. Stevens. This time the mother, Mrs. Fanny M. Stevens, was taken. She has been in ill health for some time, but death did not seem to be so close at hand, and the blow comes with some suddenness, as well as sadness. Mrs. Stevens had reached the age of 65 years, and leaves a number of sons and daughters, who will, in mourning her death, have the sympathy of many friends.

—The new McLean manufacturing company met last night and decided to proceed with the building of the woolen factory at once, and to-day they are getting bids for the work. The new building is to be 57 by 200 feet with several additional wings. The work is to be commenced at once, and the factory will be pushed to as speedy completion as possible. It will rejoice all, who are interested in the city's prosperity, to know that this manufacturing enterprise is surely to go on, and it is hoped that the other projects under contemplation may be equally successful.

—City Treasurer Haselton has sold $2,000 of city bonds, due in one year, and drawing 5 per cent interest, the proceeds being to pay the balance due for the rebuilding of Court Street bridge, which was swept away by the floods last spring. That money can be so easily borrowed at such low interest for so short a time speaks well for the credit of the city. Janesville's credit ought to be high, for there is no city in the State of over 7,500 inhabitants, which has anywhere near so light an indebtedness, Janesville's total debt being now only $26,000 including the money just borrowed. According to the charter no more than $2,000 can be levied in any one year for bridge purposes, and the repairing of Monterey bridge and the rebuilding of Court street bridge has necessitated nearly twice that amount this year, which was the cause of making this loan, rather than because the city was hard up for money. Of the $26,000 indebtedness now standing against the city, $8,000 will fall due next year, and will be easily and promptly paid, as will also the balance as fast as it falls due, so that in a few years at the farthest the city will not have one dollar of indebtedness, unless it should decide to put in water-works, or engage in some such new enterprise.

SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS.

William Jones Is Nominated for that Position by the Republicans of the Second District.

This afternoon the Republican convention called for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Superintendent of Schools in the Second District, met at the Court House, and was called to order by John Conly, of Clinton, who read the published call.

Dr. Jones, of Clinton, was chosen chairman, and A. D. Burdick, of Milton, secretary.

On motion the chair appointed as Committee on Credentials: R. M. Benson, Clinton, Dr. Stetson, Lima, and W. W. Clarke, Milton. Their report showed one contest, that being in the town of Turtle, where at a caucus held, the delegates chosen were unanimously instructed to work for and vote for William Jones, and two of the delegates thus chosen refusing to obey instructions, a majority of those who had attended the caucus, held a new caucus, and made other nominations. The convention decided to admit those chosen at this second caucus, thus barring out those who refused to obey instructions of the caucus choosing them.

An informal ballot was then taken for Superintendent, Mr. Burt, of Bradford, and Mr. Smith of La Prairie, being appointed tellers.

The informal ballot resulted:

Whole number of votes	21
Necessary to a choice	13
William Jones	14
Mary A. Cuckow	7
W. J. McIntyre	3

A formal ballot was then taken, resulting: Mr. McIntyre's name being withdrawn.

Whole number of votes	25
Necessary to a choice	13
William Jones	13
Mary A. Cuckow	6
W. J. McIntyre	1

Mr. William Jones was thereupon declared the nominee.

On motion the nomination was made unanimous.

On motion the former committee was continued, the same being, John Conly, of Clinton, J. S. Hedditch, of Bradford, A. D. Burdick, of Milton.

Adjournment was then taken.

ROBBINS IS COMING.

C. T. Kimball, the advance agent of the Burr Robbins & Colvin shows, arrived to-day, as did also the beautiful and commodious advertising car. The work of billing the city for the show,s closing performance here on the 19th inst will commence at once. We have from time to time during the season given what the press have had to say along the line of march, and the high words of praise heard on every hand, are sufficient assurance to the people of Rock county, if such assurance was needed, that the show this season is beyond all previous seasons, and keeps rank with the best in the land.

The attractions crowded into the menagerie, and the wonders of the arenic performance are of themselves worthy of tents packed with sight-seers, and the additional fact that this is the home and the winter quarters of the mammoth enterprise will excite still further interest, and there is every reason to believe that the crowd which will gather here will be a befitting close to a most successful season. The show is one of the best, and Rock county people will improve this chance to see it for themselves, and to judge for themselves whether the high praise it has received throughout the country has not been justly given, while at the same time they will show their appreciation of an amusement enterprise in which Rock county takes an especial pride and interest.

The Law of Kindness

Is universal; it affects all the human family, all animals, and may be even be found in patent medicines. Some are drastic, and the patient is obliged to suffer pains worse than the disease; but in cases of obstinate constipation, dyspepsia, there is no remedy so kind, so gentle in its effects, and yet so satisfactory, as BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. Price $1.00, trial size 10 cents.
Sold by A. J. Roberts, and Sherer & Co.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE IRON MASK.

Last evening Frederick Bryton, supported by an excellent company, opened their season, by the presentation of "The Iron Mask," in which Bryton took the role of Gaston, the child of chance. The drama is an old one, and in years past was one of the most popular ones in the great cities of the country, but has never been presented to any extent in the smaller cities, and has even in the metropolis been neglected of late. Last season Bryton made a most happy hit in it, and it proved the most popular of any in the varied repertory of the company. Its success has caused the management this year to give it the exclusive place on the stage, and no money nor labor has been spared to place it before the people in the best possible manner. The costumes are as elegant as any ever seen in Janesville, and are critically faithful to the time and land in which the play is laid. In scenic effect and in all the details, the play has been put on the stage most excellently.

This drama is a strong one, and has thrilling lines and situations, which hold and move the audience, when so faithfully brought out and portrayed as by this company. Bryton shows himself wonderfully strong, and grows in favor with the audience as the play progresses, until in the last two acts he rises to a grand height. From the dashing, warm-blooded, brave and impulsive youth he gradually merges into the strong-hearted old man, whose spirit cannot be broken by the torturing sorrows of weary years, though that sorrow slowly breaks his life, and brings death. Bryton's artistic powers are put to a severe test, through all these varied phases, but he shows himself strong—very strong.

The company supporting him is a most excellent one. The leading support, Charles J. Fyffe, as Rochfort, is particularly worthy of commendation. He has much and difficult work and through all of it he shows himself an artist of no mean order. The other members of the company are well-balanced and of such excellent material that the play was not allowed to suffer even in its most minor parts.

Although this was the first appearance of the company, the play moved off very smoothly, with the exception of some delays between acts, which were to be expected, and which will be promptly remedied hereafter. Altogether, the brilliant young actor and his support, the the play, the management, all deserve naught but praise, and the public should give them a most cordial and hearty support.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.

The names of Anthony and Ellis have become so closely and happily associated with that of the above named play, that the people need be told little beyond the date of their coming. The mere announcement that the old and always popular play is to be given here next Friday evening, will awaken the interest of all. It is without doubt the best Uncle Tom's Cabin company in the world.

SALE OF THE HARRIS WORKS.

This afternoon the sale of the Harris works took place in accordance with the advertised notice. The entire works were bought by William A. Lawrence J. D. Rexford, in behalf of a new company now being organized.

It is understood that the new company will start in with a capital stock of $100,000 and will carry the business on to a larger extent than ever, so that it will not cease to be a prominent and permanent feature of Janesville's manufacturing enterprises.

MERCHANTS, Peddlers, Farmers, Mechanics and mankind generally, wanting goods at wholesale or retail are respectfully invited to call and see the largest and finest stock of goods ever exhibited in Janesville at Sutherland's bookstore No. 29 Main Street, east side of the river.

FOOTVILLE.

—Wind and rain in abundance.

—Mr. J. H. Ryan is at home from Iowa.

—Mr. S. M. Braden has returned from Dakota, where he has been rusticating during the summer. We are glad that Stanley is back among us, but regret that he is so indisposed—he is suffering from inflammatory rhumatism.

—Miss Lillie Gavey, of Orfordville, is in town as the guest of Mrs. H. D. Becker.

—Mr. and Mrs. D. Hammel expect to start East this week on a visit with their friends.

—Miss Laura Rossiter is in town, the guest of Mrs. W. Wiggins.

—All are pleased to learn that the Rev. Mr. Brill is to stay with us another year.

—Mr. P. Nelson, of Whitewater, and Miss Nellie Beach, of Orfordville, are the teachers elect for the coming term of school.

—Miss Shehan closed her school this week. Miss Shehan has made many friends while here who will always wish her well.

—Miss Hannah Hennissee, who has been very sick with inflammatory rhoumatism, is slowly convalescing.

—Mr. J. N. Smith, who lives east of the village, is on the sick list.

—Tobacco buyers, potato buyers, &c., are plentiful.

—The boys try to talk to Ed. Brogan, but he feels so "big" that he won't deign to notice them. It's a girl.

—No doubt Mr. W. Owen will be glad when he goes to a place where thieves do not break through and steal.

—Palmer, of Spring Valley, shipped two car loads of his blooded stock to Fond du Lac for the State fair, from this place last week.
